Sources for use with Section A.

Source A: A clinical report from Captain Oswald Hope Robertson describing the establishment of the first "blood depot" during the Battle of Cambrai in 1917.

To prepare for the anticipated casualties, we successfully established a forward blood depot. I collected 22 units of type O blood in advance. By adding sodium citrate, we prevented the blood from clotting, allowing it to be stored in sterilized glass jars for up to four weeks. During the offensive, we successfully transfused 20 severely wounded Canadian soldiers who were suffering from extreme shock.
