SECTION A

Answer both questions.

Study Source A below and then answer Question 1.

Source A

Source A: From a journalist's dispatch in a Chicago newspaper, reporting on Southern voter registration in 1954.

Registering to vote in Southern states such as Mississippi and Alabama remains an unattainable goal for African Americans. Local registrars administer arbitrary 'literacy exams' that require Black applicants to interpret intricate constitutional clauses, whereas white applicants face no such hurdles. Furthermore, any Black citizen attempting to register risks immediate dismissal by their employer. Intimidation is omnipresent.

Sources/Interpretations for use with Section B.

Sources for use with Questions 3(a) and 3(c).

Source B

Source B: From a confidential memo by a leading NAACP attorney to the executive board, 1953.
Our courtroom strategy is yielding significant results. By initiating litigation in the federal courts, we have successfully outlawed the exclusionary white primary system in Texas and are now targeting segregation in higher education. The federal courts are our primary arena, and by leveraging constitutional guarantees, we are compelling the government to recognize that segregation is inherently discriminatory.

Source C

Source C: A description by a CORE volunteer in an organizational bulletin, 1952, detailing a protest in a northern community.
Our group conducted a quiet, orderly demonstration at a local department store restaurant, requesting basic service. The staff ignored us, and a hostile crowd assembled shortly after. We endured insults, physical assault, and were forcibly ejected while local law enforcement officers watched with amusement. This demonstration proves that federal policy adjustments do not automatically dissolve local hostility.

Interpretations for use with Section B.

Interpretations for use with Questions 3(b), 3(c) and 3(d).

Interpretation 1

Interpretation 1: From a modern historical study.
During the early 1950s, civil rights groups achieved critical legal milestones. The NAACP focused on a systematic litigation campaign in federal courts, bypassing obstructionist Southern officials. These courtroom triumphs demonstrated that the legal pillars of Jim Crow were vulnerable, establishing a crucial legal precedent that enabled the broader grassroots campaigns of the next decade.

Interpretation 2

Interpretation 2: From a different historical perspective.
Regardless of the legal successes in the early 1950s, day-to-day conditions for Southern Black Americans remained virtually unaltered. Supreme Court rulings lacked enforcement, allowing local segregationist leaders to ignore them. Power on the ground was maintained by hostile white groups and local police who used violence and economic reprisal to suppress any challenges to segregation.
