SECTION A

Answer both questions.
Study Source A below and then answer Question 1.

Source A

Source A: From a memoir by a civil rights worker describing segregation in the Deep South during the 1950s.

We lived under rigid segregation rules. We were barred from drinking fountains designated for whites, kept at the back of commercial establishments, and expected to yield the sidewalk to white pedestrians. Violations of these unwritten laws brought swift retribution from local police or white groups. Segregation was a constant, daily humiliation.

Sources/Interpretations for use with Section B.

Sources for use with Questions 3(a) and 3(c).

Source B

Source B: From Dr Martin Luther King Jr.'s 'I Have a Dream' speech, delivered at the Lincoln Memorial during the March on Washington, 28 August 1963.

"I say to you today, my friends, that even though we face the difficulties of today and tomorrow, I still have a dream. It is a dream deeply rooted in the American dream. I have a dream that one day this nation will rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed: 'We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal.' I have a dream that my four little children will one day live in a nation where they will not be judged by the color of their skin but by the content of their character."

Source C

Source C: From an interview with Chicago civil rights organizer Bob Lucas in the late 1970s, discussing King's Northern campaign.

Dr. King's efforts in Chicago did not succeed in securing better housing conditions. Following his departure in August 1966, ideological divisions within the coalition became more pronounced. While King was present, these disagreements had been minimized out of respect for his leadership. Afterward, local Black organizers increasingly sought to exclude white activists from leadership roles.

Interpretations for use with Section B.

Interpretations for use with Questions 3(b), 3(c) and 3(d).

Interpretation 1

Interpretation 1: From a modern historical study.
King's emphasis on nonviolent direct action allowed federal leaders, including Presidents Kennedy and Johnson, to support the civil rights cause without alienating moderate voters. His international profile and receipt of the Nobel Peace Prize in 1964 increased pressure on Congress to act. His leadership was crucial in securing the passage of the Civil Rights Act and the Voting Rights Act.

Interpretation 2

Interpretation 2: From a different historical perspective.
By the mid-1960s, legal victories in the South had raised expectations, but daily economic realities for urban Black Americans remained unchanged. When King expanded the campaign to Chicago to address housing discrimination, he faced entrenched political resistance. Although local leaders made verbal agreements, practical desegregation was not achieved, leading many young activists to embrace Black Power.
