SECTION A

Answer Question 1 and then EITHER Question 2(a) OR Question 2(b).

Study Source A below and then answer Question 1.

Source A: From the Ten Point Programme of the Black Panther Party, published in 1966.

> We, the Black Panther Party, believe we can end police violence towards our Black community. We want freedom for all Black men held in prisons. We believe that all Black people should be released from prison because they have not received a fair trial.
>
> We will organise Black self-defence groups to defend our Black community from racist police violence. The Constitution of the United States gives the right to carry weapons. We therefore believe that all Black people should arm themselves for self-defence.

Sources/interpretations for use with Section B.

Source B: A photograph published on the front page of a local newspaper in Arkansas, 1957. It shows Elizabeth Eckford, a Black American student, trying to enter Little Rock High School, Arkansas. The photograph was also published in many national newspapers.

Source C: From an interview with Myrlie Evers. She was a leading civil rights campaigner and member of the NAACP in Mississippi. The interview was used in the television documentary about civil rights, Eyes on the Prize, shown in 1987.

In 1962, when James Meredith finally joined the University of Mississippi as a student, it was a victory that many people had worked for. The victory showed the importance of using the legal system to change the rules and that the NAACP was right to use this approach.

The James Meredith case was a major breakthrough. And we celebrated. It meant that we had made progress. It also meant there was hope because we were not talking about just one man's education but what would happen for future generations. Meredith's achievement gave us, as Black people, more determination to keep working for progress in civil rights.

Interpretation 1: From And the Crooked Places Made Straight by D Chalmers, published in 1991.

> Six years after the Brown v Topeka ruling, there were still no Black children attending school together with white children in the southern states in 1960. White Southern leaders promised to resist desegregation.
>
> In 1957, as a screaming mob had gathered outside Little Rock High School, the Arkansas Governor had used the National Guard to prevent nine Black teenagers from entering the school. The events at Little Rock had prevented peaceful desegregation.

Interpretation 2: From Race Relations in the USA 1863–1980 by V Sanders, published in 2006.

> There was some change in civil rights. In 1958, the Supreme Court said that any attempt to keep schools segregated went against the American Constitution. Later, when James Meredith wanted to study at the University of Mississippi, he got legal aid from NAACP lawyers. This led to a Supreme Court decision in his favour, as well as help from President Kennedy's government. This then encouraged other Black students to apply to study at university.
