Question 3: Historiographical Interpretations [12 marks • 15 mins]

HISTORIOGRAPHICAL ANALYSIS

INTERPRETATION 1 • HISTORIAN PETER FRYER, STAYING POWER: THE HISTORY OF BLACK PEOPLE IN BRITAIN (1984)

"The Windrush pioneers arrived with high hopes, believing they were returning to their ancestral Mother Country as proud British subjects. Instead, they were met with cold weather, squalid housing, and an open colour bar. Landlords slammed doors in their faces, and employers relegated skilled tradesmen to the most menial jobs. Yet through mutual-aid 'Pardner' schemes, church fellowships, and sheer resilience, they built vibrant communities that enriched the cultural life of the nation."

INTERPRETATION 2 • SOCIOLOGIST SHEILA PATTERSON, DARK STRANGERS: A STUDY OF WEST INDIANS IN LONDON (1963)

"Post-war British society was not intentionally hostile, but rather deeply insular and bewildered by sudden cultural diversity. The initial friction in housing and employment was primarily a clash of customs, dialects, and social expectations rather than systemic racial prejudice. Given time, full employment, and gradual assimilation into British working-class neighbourhoods, Commonwealth migrants would be absorbed harmoniously into the fabric of British life."

Question 3(b): Study Interpretations 1 and 2. How do they differ about the reception faced by the Windrush Generation in post-war Britain? [4 marks] PART B

Question 3(c): Suggest one reason why Interpretations 1 and 2 give different views about the experiences of Caribbean migrants. [8 marks] PART C
