HISTORICAL ENQUIRY • UNIT NARRATIVE SYNOPSIS 1871 – 1914

"Decades of imperial vanity, secret alliances, and dreadnought arms races wound the clockwork of European catastrophe. When a teenage assassin fired two fatal shots on the streets of Sarajevo in June 1914, thirty days of diplomatic brinkmanship sleepwalked an entire continent into ruin. Trace the geopolitical friction of European empires, the naval race, and the fatal railway timetables that sparked world war."

CHRONOLOGICAL TURNING POINTS

Twelve Decisive Milestones & Causal Dominoes Culminating in the Outbreak of War

1862–1871

Bismarck's Wars & The Unification of Germany

Ref [1.1–1.2]

Through "blood and iron" wars against Denmark, Austria, and France, Prussia unifies Germany and fundamentally ruptures the European balance of power.

18 Jan 1871

Proclamation of the German Empire at Versailles

Ref [1.2–1.3]

King Wilhelm I is crowned Kaiser in the Hall of Mirrors. Defeated France cedes Alsace-Lorraine and pays 5 billion gold francs in indemnity.

May 1871

Annexation of Alsace-Lorraine & The Cult of Revanche

Ref [1.3–1.4]

Seizure of border fortresses Metz and Strasbourg alienates 1.6 million French citizens, creating an implacable enemy and four decades of French hatred.

1871–1890

Bismarckian Isolation & The Secret Reinsurance Treaty

Ref [1.5–1.6]

Haunted by fear of a two-front encirclement, Chancellor Bismarck spins a defensive diplomatic web, culminating in the 1887 Russian treaty.

1884–1885

The Berlin Conference & The Scramble for Africa

Ref [2.1–2.2]

Fourteen powers partition Africa under "effective occupation". Latecomer Germany receives only scattered territories, sparking imperial resentment.

1890

Dismissal of Bismarck & Wilhelm II's Weltpolitik

Ref [2.3]

Kaiser Wilhelm II fires Bismarck, lets the Russian treaty lapse, and adopts Weltpolitik, demanding Germany's aggressive "place in the sun".

1898–1900

Admiral von Tirpitz & The German Navy Laws

Ref [3.1–3.2]

Germany legislates massive battle fleet construction, deploying the "Risk Theory" to threaten the Royal Navy in the North Sea.

1904–1907

The Diplomatic Revolution: The Triple Entente

Ref [4.1–4.3]

Alarmed by German naval expansion, Britain abandons "Splendid Isolation" to sign defensive ententes with France (1904) and Russia (1907).

1905–1906

The First Moroccan Crisis: Kaiser at Tangier

Ref [2.4]

Wilhelm II visits Tangier to challenge French control. The 1906 Algeciras Conference isolates Germany and cements the Anglo-French Entente.

Feb 1906

Launch of HMS Dreadnought & Naval Arms Race

Ref [3.3–3.5]

Royal Navy launches the first all-big-gun, steam-turbine battleship, making all older fleets obsolete and resetting naval competition.

1908–1911

Bosnian Annexation Crisis & The Panther at Agadir

Ref [2.5, 4.4]

Austria annexes Bosnia, humiliating Serbia and Russia. In 1911, German gunboat SMS Panther arrives in Agadir, bringing Europe close to war.

28 Jun – 4 Aug 1914

Sarajevo Assassination, July Crisis & Outbreak of War

Ref [5.1–5.5]

Gavrilo Princip assassinates Archduke Franz Ferdinand. The German Blank Cheque, Austrian ultimatum, and railway mobilization trigger general war.

ENQUIRY 01

PILLAR 1 • CORE NARRATIVE

German Unification, Franco-Prussian War & Bismarck (1871–1890)

KEY ENQUIRY QUESTION How did the creation of the German Empire and the seizure of Alsace-Lorraine permanently rupture European peace?

[1.1] THE FRAGMENTED CHESSBOARD, ZOLLVEREIN & PRUSSIAN POWER (1862–1866)

What enabled Prussia to overturn the 1815 balance of power?

In the mid-nineteenth century, Central Europe was fragmented into 39 separate German states divided between Austrian and Prussian influence. Determined to unite Germany under the Prussian monarchy, Minister-President Otto von Bismarck delivered his famous Bismarck's Blood & Iron speech in 1862, arguing that military strength alone determined history.

Bismarck expanded Prussian armed forces through modern railways and lethal, breech-loading deadly Krupp steel guns. Prussian military technology outgunned Austria and Denmark, establishing Prussia as the unchallenged master of Northern Germany.

[1.2] THE SEDAN DEBACLE & PROCLAMATION AT VERSAILLES (1870–1871)

How was the German Empire proclaimed at Versailles in 1871?

In July 1870, Bismarck provoked war with France to rally the independent southern German kingdoms into a national union. At the Battle of Sedan, Prussian encirclement resulted in French Emperor captured at Sedan alongside eighty thousand soldiers, toppling Emperor Napoleon III's imperial regime.

On 18 January 1871, German princes gathered in the Palace of Versailles where the German Empire crowned at Versailles, appointing Kaiser Wilhelm I. Following victory, Prussia dominates Europe as the continent's leading industrial and military titan.

[1.3] THE TREATY OF FRANKFURT & ANNEXATION OF ALSACE-LORRAINE (MAY 1871)

Why did the annexation of Alsace-Lorraine shatter peace?

The 1871 Treaty of Frankfurt imposed harsh punitive terms on defeated France. Bismarck ordered German occupation troops to remain in French cities until the French forced to pay 5 billion gold francs in war indemnities.

Crucially, France was humiliated by losing coal and iron land through the annexation of the wealthy border provinces of Alsace-Lorraine. This painful territorial seizure created enduring hatred between France and Germany that poisoned European international relations for four decades.

[1.4] FRENCH REVANCHE & THE CULT OF THE LOST PROVINCES (1871–1889)

In what ways did French "Revanche" shape patriotic culture?

Across the French Third Republic, the loss of Alsace-Lorraine inspired revanche—a national desire for vengeance against Germany. In primary schools across the nation, patriotic teachers kept classroom maps veiled in black crepe paper to mourn the lost eastern provinces every morning.

French schoolchildren grew up dreaming of French revenge and the future liberation of their homeland. The French government introduced universal army conscription for boys reaching twenty, training millions of young citizens for an unavoidable continental war.

[1.5] BISMARCKIAN ISOLATION, THE REINSURANCE TREATY & TWO-FRONT DREAD (1871–1890)

Evaluate how Bismarck's diplomacy isolated the French Republic.

As Imperial Chancellor, Otto von Bismarck devoted his diplomatic career to keeping France isolated from potential European allies. Bismarck was permanently haunted by the existential fear of war on two fronts against France in the west and Tsarist Russia in the east.

To safeguard Germany's eastern frontier, Bismarck negotiated a secret deal with Russia in the 1887 Reinsurance Treaty, promising mutual neutrality. Through cautious diplomacy, Bismarck balanced European alliances and protected the newly created German Reich.

ENQUIRY 02

PILLAR 1 • CORE NARRATIVE

Imperial Rivalry, the Scramble for Africa & the Moroccan Crises (1884–1911)

KEY ENQUIRY QUESTION How did imperial ambition in Africa and Kaiser Wilhelm II's "Weltpolitik" bring European powers to the brink of war?

[2.1] THE SCRAMBLE FOR AFRICA & THE BERLIN CONFERENCE (1884–1885)

Why did European empires carve up Africa in the 1880s Scramble?

In the late nineteenth century, European empires engaged in carving up African land during the competitive Scramble for Africa. Industrial powers sought overseas colonies to exploit raw materials, including valuable rubber, copper & mineral riches, palm oil, and cotton.

To prevent armed clashes among rival powers, Chancellor Bismarck organized the 1884 Berlin Conference. The rules made at Berlin meeting established that empires had to prove "effective occupation", prompting a rapid rush to conquer the African interior.

[2.2] KAISER WILHELM II,"WELTPOLITIK" & "A PLACE IN THE SUN" (1890–1897)

Explain why Wilhelm II launched "Weltpolitik" in the 1890s.

In 1890, twenty-nine-year-old Kaiser Wilhelm II forced the sudden resignation of the veteran Chancellor. Kaiser sacks old Bismarck to abandon cautious European balance-of-power treaties in favour of an aggressive global strategy known as Weltpolitik ("World Policy").

Wilhelm envied the vast overseas territories of Great Britain and France, loudly demanding a place in the sun for the German nation. Building a German empire across Africa, Asia, and the Pacific required colonial acquisitions and a battle fleet to challenge British naval mastery.

[2.3] THE FIRST MOROCCAN CRISIS & THE LANDING AT TANGIER (MARCH 1905)

What happened when the Kaiser landed at Tangier in 1905?

In March 1905, Kaiser Wilhelm challenged expanding French influence across North Africa by landing unannounced at Tangier. In a theatrical show of imperial defiance, the Kaiser rides white horse through the streets to the German embassy.

Wilhelm was actively testing Britain and France following their 1904 Entente Cordiale agreement, openly promising to protect Morocco as a free, independent sovereign state. Wilhelm intended to humiliate the French Republic and split the fledgling Anglo-French alliance before European eyes.

[2.4] THE ALGECIRAS CONFERENCE & GERMAN DIPLOMATIC ISOLATION (1906)

To what extent did the 1906 Algeciras Conference isolate Germany?

The Moroccan dispute was settled at the 1906 Algeciras Conference in Spain. The international summit proved a catastrophic diplomatic setback for Berlin: Germany defeated in vote by twelve nations to two, with only Austria-Hungary supporting the German delegation.

Throughout the crisis, Britain backs up France completely, initiating secret joint military staff conversations in London. Instead of breaking the Entente, German bullying cemented Anglo-French defense ties, leaving German leaders fearing being surrounded by hostile powers on all borders.

[2.5] THE SECOND MOROCCAN CRISIS: THE PANTHER AT AGADIR & MANSION HOUSE (JULY 1911)

Why did the gunboat Panther at Agadir bring Europe close to war?

In July 1911, imperial tensions erupted again when French forces marched to suppress unrest in Fez. Germany reacted aggressively: the gunboat sent to bully France, SMS Panther, anchored threateningly inside the Moroccan port of Agadir.

British leaders feared Germany sought an Atlantic naval base. In his famous Mansion House speech, Chancellor David Lloyd George issues warning that Britain would fight to defend international standing. Humiliated into retreat, Germany watched Britain and France plan for war with coordinated naval deployments.

ENQUIRY 03

PILLAR 1 • CORE NARRATIVE

The Anglo-German Naval Arms Race & HMS Dreadnought (1898–1914)

KEY ENQUIRY QUESTION Why did a battleship building contest destroy Anglo-German relations and reset naval supremacy?

[3.1] THE TWO-POWER STANDARD & BRITISH MARITIME SURVIVAL (1889–1897)

Why was naval supremacy vital for Great Britain's survival?

As an island nation, Great Britain relied on unchallenged maritime dominance for national survival. With Britain surrounded by sea and over sixty percent of its essential food brought by ships, an enemy naval blockade meant rapid starvation for British civilians.

In 1889, Parliament codified the Two-Power Standard into national law. This statutory standard required the Royal Navy to maintain a battleship fleet twice as big as rivals France and Russia combined, guaranteeing imperial ocean security and protecting worldwide merchant shipping lanes.

[3.2] ADMIRAL VON TIRPITZ, GERMAN NAVAL LAWS & "RISK THEORY" (1898–1900)

How did Tirpitz's "Risk Theory" plan to challenge the Royal Navy?

In 1898, German Naval Secretary Admiral Alfred von Tirpitz secured the German Naval Laws through the Reichstag. Tirpitz plans High Seas Fleet expansion directly across the German coastline, formulating his controversial "Risk Theory" to challenge British supremacy.

By building warships in North Sea bases, Tirpitz calculated that Germany could threaten the Royal Navy into diplomatic neutrality. Threatening British waters convinced the Admiralty that Germany was preparing to challenge British naval command of home waters in a future conflict.

[3.3] THE DREADNOUGHT REVOLUTION: ALL-BIG-GUN TECHNOLOGY (FEBRUARY 1906)

Why did HMS Dreadnought reset naval supremacy to zero?

In 1906, Britain's First Sea Lord Sir John Fisher unveiled HMS Dreadnought, revolutionizing warship design worldwide. The battleship was armed with ten huge 12-inch guns capable of firing broadsides twice as heavy as any vessel afloat.

Powered by fast steam turbine engines, Dreadnought surpassed every rival warship in speed and firepower. However, by rendering all older battleships now useless overnight, Dreadnought wiped out Britain's naval lead, allowing Germany to start building dreadnoughts on equal terms.

[3.4] THE 1909 NAVAL PANIC: "WE WANT EIGHT AND WE WON'T WAIT!" (1909)

What triggered the 1909 British naval panic ("We want eight")?

By 1909, naval competition reached fever pitch and national hysteria in Great Britain. British naval intelligence reported German shipyards accelerating construction, leading the anxious British public into fearing secret German docks constructing hidden battleships along the Baltic coast.

Sensational newspaper headlines cause panic across the country, while crowds marched chanting: "We want eight and we won't wait!" Under immense political pressure, the government funded building eight battleships in a single year, maintaining British dominance.

[3.5] THE HALDANE MISSION FAILURE & STRATEGIC REDEPLOYMENT (1912–1914)

Evaluate why the 1912 Haldane Mission failed to stop the arms race.

In 1912, British War Secretary Lord Haldane travelled to Berlin seeking a formal naval truce between empires. Haldane offered territorial concessions in Africa if Germany reduced dreadnought construction, but diplomatic talks in Berlin fail completely due to Kaiser Wilhelm's opposition.

Kaiser Wilhelm and Tirpitz insisted that Germany refuses to stop building without a British neutrality pledge. Britain redeployed its Mediterranean battleships to home ports, ensuring Royal Navy ships guard North Sea waters against German naval strikes and pre-emptive attacks.

ENQUIRY 04

PILLAR 1 • CORE NARRATIVE

The Alliance Systems & the Balkan Powder Keg (1879–1913)

KEY ENQUIRY QUESTION Did European military alliances protect continental peace or guarantee a domino-effect catastrophe?

[4.1] THE CENTRAL EUROPEAN BLOC: DUAL ALLIANCE & TRIPLE ALLIANCE (1879–1882)

How did Bismarck's Dual Alliance create a Central European bloc?

Between 1879 and 1882, Central Europe unified into a formidable mutual military coalition. Through the defensive Dual Alliance of 1879, Germany backs Austria to protect both central empires against Russian territorial ambitions in Eastern Europe and the volatile Balkans.

In 1882, Italy joins the Triple Alliance alongside Germany and Austria-Hungary. The mutual defense treaty guaranteed military assistance, securing a vital promise of help against Russia if war erupted, dividing the continent into armed power blocs.

[4.2] THE COUNTER-ALLIANCE: FRANCO-RUSSIAN ALLIANCE & TRIPLE ENTENTE (1894–1907)

Explain why the 1894 Franco-Russian Alliance broke isolation.

When Germany allowed its Russian alliance to expire, the French Republic seized the opportunity to break its diplomatic isolation. In 1894, French money helps Russia finance industrialisation and construct strategic military railways toward Germany's frontier, sealing the formal Franco-Russian Military Alliance.

A decade later, Britain and France shake hands over colonial rivalries in the 1904 Entente Cordiale. By 1907, Britain resolved differences with Russia, completing the Triple Entente formed to counterbalance the Central Powers.

[4.3] THE "BALKAN POWDER KEG", OTTOMAN DECLINE & PAN-SLAVISM (1900–1908)

Why was south-eastern Europe known as the "Balkan Powder Keg"?

The mountainous Balkan peninsula became known as the explosive "powder keg of Europe". With the ancient Ottoman Empire falling apart after centuries of dominance, newly emerging Balkan nations fought to liberate territory from collapsing Turkish rule.

Millions of Orthodox Slavic peoples want freedom from foreign imperial domination, looking to independent Serbia and Tsarist Russia for protection. In this volatile region, expansionist Austria clashes with Russia as both rival empires sought hegemony over the crumbling Balkans.

[4.4] THE 1908 BOSNIAN ANNEXATION CRISIS & RUSSIAN HUMILIATION (OCTOBER 1908)

What were the consequences of the 1908 Bosnian Annexation Crisis?

In October 1908, crisis erupted across south-eastern Europe when Austria grabs Bosnia and Herzegovina, formally annexing the Slavic territories without international approval. The annexation sparked furious Serbian fury at land grab, as Serbian nationalists dreamed of creating a united South Slavic state.

Tsarist Russia mobilised to support Serbia, but Germany issued a threatening ultimatum demanding Russian compliance. Unprepared for war, Russia forced to back down in humiliation, swearing never to yield to Austro-German intimidation again.

[4.5] THE 1912–1913 BALKAN WARS & THE PRE-EMPTIVE WAR URGE (1912–1913)

To what extent did the 1912–13 Balkan Wars embolden Serbia?

In 1912 and 1913, the Balkan League attacked the Turks in the Balkan Wars, expelling Ottoman authority from Europe. Serbia emerged victorious: Serbia wins two wars in rapid succession, dramatically expanding its regional influence and national prestige.

The kingdom achieved double the land and army strength, inspiring militant pan-Slav nationalists inside the Austro-Hungarian empire. Terrified of ethnic disintegration, hawkish generals in Vienna concluded that Austria plans to crush Serbia in a pre-emptive strike before Slavic nationalism dismantled their realm.

ENQUIRY 05

PILLAR 1 • CORE NARRATIVE

The July Crisis: Sarajevo to the Outbreak of War (June–August 1914)

KEY ENQUIRY QUESTION Why did a single assassination in Sarajevo ignite thirty-seven days of diplomatic madness and world war?

[5.1] THE ASSASSINATION OF FRANZ FERDINAND IN SARAJEVO (28 JUNE 1914)

What motivated the Black Hand to assassinate Franz Ferdinand in Sarajevo?

On 28 June 1914, Archduke Franz Ferdinand, heir to the Austro-Hungarian throne, toured Sarajevo. Travelling in an open-top car in Sarajevo with his wife Sophie, the royal couple survived an initial grenade attack on the Appel Quay.

Later that morning, the royal chauffeur made a fatal wrong turn at the sandwich shop where Black Hand conspirator Gavrilo Princip stood. Stepping forward, Gavrilo Princip fires two shots at point-blank range, assassinating the Archduke and Sophie and igniting the July Crisis.

[5.2] THE "BLANK CHEQUE" & THE ESCALATION OF THE CRISIS (5 JULY 1914)

How did Germany's "Blank Cheque" escalate the regional crisis?

The Austro-Hungarian government resolved to use the Sarajevo assassination to crush Serbia militarily once and for all. However, Austrian leaders feared that invading Serbia would trigger Russian military intervention to protect Slavic independence across Eastern Europe.

On 5 July 1914, the German Kaiser promises total support to Emperor Franz Joseph. This unconditional blank cheque given to Austria guaranteed German military alliance under all circumstances, leaving Austria ready to attack Serbia regardless of European consequences.

[5.3] THE TEN-POINT ULTIMATUM & DECLARATION OF WAR ON SERBIA (23–28 JULY 1914)

Explain why Austria's Ten-Point Ultimatum made war inevitable.

On 23 July 1914, Austria-Hungary delivered an ultimatum containing harsh ten-point demands designed deliberately to be rejected by Serbian authorities within forty-eight hours. The ultimatum included demanding Austrian police in Belgrade to arrest dissidents and suppress anti-Austrian groups, directly violating Serbian independent national sovereignty.

Although Serbia accepted nine conditions, Austria broke diplomatic ties. On 28 July, Austria declared war, shelling Serbia from the river Danube with gunboats and initiating Europe's descent into world war.

[5.4] RAILWAY MOBILISATION SCHEDULES & THE DOMINO EFFECT (29–31 JULY 1914)

In what ways did rigid railway mobilisation schedules trigger the domino effect?

Austrian aggression activated Europe's rigid military alliances across the continent. Bound by sacred honour to protect Serbia, Tsar Nicholas II ordered general mobilisation: Russian millions call up to war across thousands of miles of the Russian Empire.

Across Europe, millions of soldiers boarding trains headed toward borders according to rigid railway timetables. With the clock ticking for generals terrified of being caught unready, mobilisation plans could not be halted without risking total military defeat.

[5.5] THE SCHLIEFFEN PLAN, BELGIAN NEUTRALITY & BRITISH ENTRY (1–4 AUGUST 1914)

What forced Great Britain to declare war following the invasion of Belgium?

Executing the Schlieffen Plan to knock out France before Russia mobilized, German troops march into Belgium on 4 August 1914. German Chancellor Bethmann-Hollweg dismissed the 1839 Treaty of London guaranteeing Belgian neutrality as a mere scrap of paper treaty broken at will.

Great Britain demanded immediate German withdrawal from neutral territory. When Germany refused, Britain enters the war at midnight on 4 August 1914, plunging the British Empire into the catastrophic slaughter of the First World War.
